
TERRY THEISE PRAISES MÜLLER-CATOIR: "THESE WINES ARE WORLD-CLASS"

High Praise for Pinot Noir and Pinot Blanc

Even before completing his final tasting report, renowned American wine critic Terry Theise has expressed exceptional enthusiasm for Müller-Catoir's latest releases.

The estate's Pinot Noirs made a particularly strong impression on him. "Your status as a Spätburgunder producer must be considered elite," Theise writes. These wines are far more than "something interesting you are doing." In his view, they are simply "world-class."

Theise is equally enthusiastic about the 2024 Pinot Blancs (Weissburgunder). Not only are they, in his opinion, the finest Pinot Blancs he has ever tasted from Müller-Catoir, they rank "among the very best expressions of this grape I have ever tasted."

Theise expects to complete his full report in the coming days. As is his practice, he tastes each wine multiple times over several days before reaching his conclusions. The results are due to be published soon in The World of Fine Wine. He is convinced that what the estate is achieving with its Pinot Noirs and this remarkable group of Pinot Blancs deserves wider attention.

And what about the Rieslings? Theise offers characteristic understatement: "The Rieslings are fine, don't worry! But one expects them to be."

For Müller-Catoir, these early impressions provide meaningful confirmation of its chosen path: the continued refinement of its Burgundian varieties, without losing sight of origin and stylistic precision.
